Some of the party spent their Sundas relaxing. Kalarus studied his Dwemer puzzle box/cube and various scraps of Dwemer metal the group had recovered. Cocius went to the Imperial Quartermaster to buy some Imperial Scalemail. Jo'Rak trailed Shabhi and generally watched the Bard College to determine what he could about their patterns. By noon Kalarus felt he needed to question the Dominate Adept. So he and Yngvar went to the jail and asked to see the prisoner. At first they were rebuffed but they dropped the fact that they were the dragon slayers and the guards, in awe, let them in. The Dominate Adept was as mad as before and Yngvar had to ruff him up a bit to get him to stop his mad ranting. Kalarus was able to get the name of the location where the Dominate Adept had found the Dwemer spheres: Kagrenzel. Kalarus left one of the Dominate Adept's books, Dwarves Vol. 2, just out of his reach. After Kalarus and Yngvar left, the guards came in and kicked the book towards the Dominate Adept to get him to shut up. He finally calmed down muttering to himself. After the guards left the Dominate Adept retrieved some lock picks from the spine of the book and got to work on his cell door.

Jo'Rak learned that Borkul was having a special presentation by one of the members of the Bards collage and that all the bards would be attending except Shabhi, who would be out of town for a tutoring lesson.

With that bit of info, Jo'Rak informed the others they would be shadowing Shabhi this very eve. Using Jo'Rak's Moonpath Walker abilities he was able to shadow Shabhi till she made camp for the night. The party, camped well out of sight of her. The next day the party continued to follow the road east of Kvatch while Jo'Rak flitted between tailing Shabhi and informing the group of her whereabouts.

At about midday the group encountered some Vigilants of Stendarr on their way to Kvatch. There was a tense moment as the Vigilants detected the taint of daedra on Kalarus. They were ready for violence till it was shone that Kalarus was carrying some Clannfear claws. They still were not convinced of his innocence but continued on to Kvatch.

The party travelled along the road the rest of the day and in the evening, Shabhi stopped only to make supper then headed further along the road only to leave the path upon finding a marker several hours later.

Jo'Rak was able to leave a sign for Yngvar on the road and followed Shabhi to a small ruined cabin. There he found her putting on the garb and armor of a member of the Dark Brotherhood. He overheard her muttering to herself about the guild being overrun by vampires. He went back to the group and told them of this. The group decided to follow Shabhi to the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary and kill them all.

But on the way there Shabhi found them! And surrendered to Cocius. Opening a dialog with the assassin revealed that Shabhi intended on taking back her guild from some vampires who were not following the way of the brotherhood. The group agreed to help her kill the vampires and any others under their sway. In return they would gain the friendship of the Dark Brotherhood.

Shabhi drew a crude map for them so they could plan their attack and they decided to wait until dawn so that all would be able to see their targets, not just the Khajit.
